BILL HOHENZOLLEN.

If he had loved the green trees,

The dry ground he'd have to leave him.

If friends had dared to call him this,

He might have been a monarch still.

If he had ever stopped to play,

Or driven them upon the king,

He might not now be an outlaw.

If he had ever turned aside,

And dropped his dignity and pride,

He'd be a little neighbor.

With humble men who crossed his way,

If he had ever spent one day,

In comradeship—he might not now

Have hated written me so few.

Had he loved skies and running brooks,

And tangled woods and fishing needs,

And learned to call the birds by name,

Or driven them round as they grew

He'd have left his throne.

To talk with men, he might have known

Some secrets of the human heart,

And better played, the monarch's part.

If he had ever slept in his bed,

Or lay his head upon his pillow,

He'd be a little neighbor.

With humble men who crossed his way,

If he had ever spent one day,

In comradeship—he might not now

Have hated written me so few.

Had he loved skies and running brooks,

And tangled woods and fishing needs,

And learned to call the birds by name,

Or driven them round as they grew

He'd have left his throne.

To talk with men, he might have known

Some secrets of the human heart,

And better played, the monarch's part.

If he had ever slept in his bed,

Or lay his head upon his pillow,

He'd be a little neighbor.

With humble men who crossed his way,

If he had ever spent one day,

In comradeship—he might not now

Have hated written me so few.

That man who worships power alone,

Will suddenly be overthrown.

When seen Wednesday afternoon,

Sykes said, "I am surprised that such an indictment should be brought against me. I have made bond and am ready for a hearing on this accusation."

E. S. MacQueen, former county investigator, declined Wednesday on the charge of receiving a stolen automobile from Denny Cummings on or about November 25, 1917, made bond of $15,000 shortly after notification of the return of the true bill and was released pending the trial of his case by the district court.

Others against whom indictments were returned Wednesday had not been located or notified Wednesday night. No information as to the identity of these persons will be made public until the defendants have been taken in custody or have made good their appearance before the grand jury.

A number of the indictments were found against defendants charged with transportation and sale of liquor in Tulsa county. Defendants charged with violation of the liquor laws will be taken before the county court, where their bonds may be made.

The indictment against MacQueen states that on November 25, 1917, he obtained a Humptulip automobile from Denny Cummings for a consideration knowing that the automobile had been stolen from the American Petroleum company.

"I am not guilty of the charge in the indictment against me and am ready to go to trial tomorrow," MacQueen stated when questioned about the case against him.

In his belief, the car referred to in the indictment is the Humptulip roadster taken by him, Deputy United States Marshal Bill Ellis and Constable John Gregory from the office of Earl Trumble at the Joe Train building on the night of December 25. The car contained several cases of whisky and confirmation proceedings were brought against the car by County Judge Sanderson a short time later.

The car was purchased by the county commissioners and turned over to the county attorney's office for use by MacQueen. Later the car was sold at public auction by the county to Frank Wolfe, father-in-law of George Baker, then county farm agent. Some time ago the car was sold to Wolfe by the county and turned over to the county engineer for county use.

He also two weeks ago an insurance company brought suit against the car alleging that it was a stolen car and belonged to the American Petroleum company.

The name of Denny Cummings, from whom MacQueen is alleged to have purchased the car, does not appear on the records of the state, but MacQueen says that he never heard of any such man. Other witnesses are Miss Eddie Hoffman, clerk in the county attorney's office for the past two years; D. Baker, N. D. Menefee, agent for the insurance company; George W. Snedden, Earl Trumble, Mrs. Earl Trumble and Elmo Trumble.

Earl Trumble has been in the county jail for the past six weeks.

There were six cases of automobile stealing pending against him when the new county administration went into office, MacQueen says.

Trumble has not had a preliminary hearing since his confinement.

MacQueen was born in October, 1915, and served until the new county administration went into office. Since he has operated a private detective agency and has been retained by the Automobile club as investigator.

During his term of office MacQueen waged an aggressive fight on the behalf of drivers and destroyed more whisky and beer than any other officer in Tulsa county's history. He also recovered many stolen automobiles.

The indictment has not been unsealed and for several days there have been rumors current that others were to be included in the indictment.
